Have faculty meetings become a 3D memo?

What is the best use of your face to face time?

Using Today's Meet in a faculty meeting provides everyone a voice.

When you are taking a different approach to faculty meetings you are role modeling an outside the box way of working with kids, too.

If the leaders don't get it, it won't happen. We are going to flip the first principal meeting in our district this year - @raefearing

When I see leaders trying different ways to maximize my time in admin meetings, it helps me envision ways to turn around & maximize time w/ my staff. We have to do the same thing for teachers - give them the OK, the training/support & time to learn/experience tools that make this possible. @joe_mazza

What about putting out a blank agenda for a faculty meeting and having teachers set the agenda? Is it a faculty meeting or a Principal's Meeting? @patrickmlarkin

If you try something new at a faculty meeting and it bombs...how much worse will that be than your traditional meeting? @patrickmlarkin

Agree 100% Patrick. We want to build a culture where teachers take educational risks. If we're not a little uncomfortable with what we're doing or "trying" we're probably not learning much in terms of new and innovative ideas. @joe_mazza

With the new teacher eval system and PARCC down the road, why not film teachers in the classroom demonstrating specific components observers look for what evaluating? Guided Reading sessions, Going over the writing process, etc. But... what will the Union say about teachers being filmed? At Fac meetings, show videos for teachers to assess and discuss. @Sirotiak02

Lots of options for teachers & leaders to "flip" Back to School Night for parents. Give the parents the information they need ahead of time so that when they get to the classroom the relationship building and Q&A can start immediately instead of after the 30 min preso which leaves 5 min to chat. @joe_mazza
